Curso: Training Course on Biotechnology Application in Food Industries for Developing Countries

Descripción: Commissioned by the Ministry of Commerce of P.R. China, China National Research Institute of Food and Fermentation Industries (CNRIFFI) is to organize "2016 Training Course on Biotechnology Application in Food Industries for Developing Countries" (Working language: English, duration: 56 days) from August 25 to October 19, 2016. Through lectures and internship in factory, this training course aims at helping trainees to master basic theories, methods and technical development trends of food-related biotechnology, update their knowledge of the current development of food bio-industries in China, facilitate their connections with R&D institutes and equipment manufacturers in China and to build up their capacity of solving problems related to food industry in their own countries with basic methodologies of bio-technology application. The training will consist of lectures on the application of traditional fermentation techniques and enzymes in food processing in China, alcoholic fermentation technology, organic acid fermentation technology, amino acid fermentation technology and application of biotechnology in dairy products, bakery and fruit and vegetable processing, etc. Experiments and factory visits as well as field trips in Beijing and neighboring provinces will also be included.

This program aims to showcase the development and achievements that China has scored in food biotechnology and help participants fully understand the status quo, development trend and experiences of China's efforts in food biotechnology. Through this program, we hope to establish an effective platform for communications between China and other developing countries in food biotechnology and between domestic and international experts, thus facilitating international cooperation and trade in technologies and products.
